21 June 1966

Dear Mr. Dulles:

I take great pleasure in extending to you a most cordial invitation to address the members of The National War College at 9:00 a.m. on Thursday, 13 October 1966, on the subject, "Intelligence Considerations in the Formulation of National Security Policy."

On this day, the class will examine the intelligence responsibilities of the various Government agencies in national security policy formulation and the responsibility of the Central Intelligence Agency to coordinate all United States intelligence in the interest of national security. In view of your vast experience in international affairs and the intelligence community, it would greatly benefit the class to hear your views on this subject. We would be especially interested to hear you discuss those intelligence factors which you consider paramount in making major decisions on national security policy.

Should you be able to accept this invitation, we shall communicate with you further regarding the administrative arrangements for your visit.

Trusting that we may have the pleasure of welcoming you back to the college, and with all good wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,

JARRED V. CRABB
Major General, U. S. Air Force
Acting Commandant

The Honorable Allen W. Dulles
Director, Central Intelligence Agency
